In a Class by Themselves: A Proposal to Incorporate Tribal Courts into the Federal Court System Without Compromising Their Unique Status as “Domestic Dependent Nations”

R. Stephen McNeill, ’08L

Tearing Fashion Design Protection Apart at the Seams

Lisa J. Hedrick, ’08L
Presentation

Lisa J. Hedrick, ’08L

Tearing Fashion Design Protection Apart at the Seams

Ms. Hedrick received the Washington and Lee Law Council Law Review Award for this Note. She graduated from the College of William and Mary in 2003 and is a Managing Editor for Volume 65 of the Law Review. Professors Sarah K. Wi-ant and Samuel W. Calhoun served as faculty advisors in the preparation of this Note.

Comments

Christopher Sprigman is an Associate Professor at the University of Virginia. Professor Sprigman received his B.A. with honors from the University of Pennsylvania in 1988 and attended the University of Chicago Law School where he served as a Comment Editor for the University of Chicago Law Review and graduated with honors in 1993. Following graduation, he clerked for the Honorable Stephen Reinhardt of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and for Justice Lourens H.W. Ackerman of the Constitutional Court of South Africa and taught at the law school of the University of Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa. From 1999 to 2001, Professor Sprigman served as Appellate Counsel in the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Department of Justice, where he worked on U.S. v. Microsoft, among other matters. He then joined the Washington, D.C. office of King & Spalding LLP, and was elected a partner. In 2003, he left law practice to become a Residential Fellow at the Center for Internet & Society at Stanford Law School. Professor Sprigman is the author of several scholarly articles including The Piracy Paradox: Innovation and Intellectual Property in Fashion Design (2006).

Norman L. Balmer is an Adjunct Professor of Law at the Washington and Lee University School of Law. Professor Balmer received his B.S. degree in 1968, with honors, from the Pennsylvania State University and received his J.D. in 1971, with honors, from George Washington University National Law Center. Admitted to practice in Virginia and District of Columbia, he was an associate at Morton, Bernard, Brown, Roberts & Sutherland from 1971–75 and a partner from 1975–77. Professor Balmer worked in the Patent Department of Monsanto Company from 1977–80, and served as Project Director and Congressional Fellow for the Office of Technology Assessment of the U.S. Congress from 1980–82. Chief Patent Counsel in the Law Department of Union Carbide Corporation from 1982–2001, Professor Balmer has been an independent consultant since 2001.

Presentation

R. Stephen McNeill, ’08L

In a Class by Themselves: A Proposal to Incorporate Tribal Courts into the Federal Court System Without Compromising Their Unique Status as "Domestic Dependent Nations"

Mr. McNeill received the Roy L. Steinheimer Law Review Award for this Note. He graduated from Auburn University at Montgomery in 2002 and is a Senior Articles Editor for Volume 65 of the Law Review. Professor Montré Carodine served as faculty advisor in the preparation of this Note.

Comments

Frank Pommersheim is a Professor of Law at The University of South Dakota School of Law. Professor Pommersheim received his B.A. from Colgate University; his J.D. from Columbia University; and his M.P.A. from Harvard University. Prior to joining the faculty of The University of South Dakota School of Law in 1984, he lived and worked on the Rosebud Sioux Reservation for ten years. Professor Pommersheim currently serves on a number of tribal appellate courts throughout Indian country and was most recently selected as Chief Justice for the newly formed Lower Sioux Tribal Court of Appeals. He writes extensively in the field of Indian law and is the author of Braid of Feathers: American Indian Law & Contemporary Tribal Life (1995) and numerous scholarly articles. Professor Pommersheim received the University of South Dakota Belbas-Larson Award for Excellence in Teaching in 1998 and the South Dakota Peace and Justice Center Reconciliation Award in 2000. A contributor to the 2005 edition of Cohen’s Handbook of Federal Indian Law, he received the 2006 John Wesley Jackson Memorial Award as outstanding Professor of Law and is currently working on a book entitled Broken Landscape: Indians, Indian Tribes and the Constitution.

Caprice L. Roberts is a Visiting Professor at the Washington and Lee University School of Law. Professor Roberts received her B.A. degree from Rhodes College and her J.D. from Washington and Lee University School of Law, magna cum laude, Order of the Coif. While attending the School of Law, she was Lead Articles Editor for the Washington and Lee Law Review. Following graduation, Professor Roberts was admitted to practice in Georgia, Tennessee, and District of Columbia. She was a law clerk for Judge Julia Smith Gibbons of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Tennessee and a law clerk for Judge Ronald Lee Gilman of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Memphis. An associate for Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom in Washington, D.C. from 1999–2002, she is currently an Associate Professor of Law at West Virginia University College of Law.